And we ask you all to share any experiences you have out in the streets of Cape Coral or Fort Myers directly related to the development of Hurricane Fay.

Long lines at stores and gas stations? Gas stations out of fuel? If it comes to evacuation orders, share your evacuation plans with us.

Let us know about your hurricane preparedness kits, do you have them ready?

Any Florida old-timers out there? Have you been through the historic storms? Any stories you'd like to share? What worked for you and what didn't? Share your knowledge and experience with the rest of our community.

These updates from the NHC are crazy. It's like they have no idea what this storm is going to do.

The latest update puts us back near ground zero for landfall.

I wonder if it will change again later?
